

A SUNDAY DINNER

BY CORNELIA C. BEDFORD.

Though our reasons therefor may be varied, there are few of us who, as housewives, fail to desire and to plan for Sunday dinners which are a shade more elaborate than those served on the six preceding days. At the same time we must have consideration for those who cook the meal and the time spent in elaborating one dish is counterbalanced by the setting forth of others which take but few moments to prepare. The dinner for which we give directions today is good, yet not so intricate as to call for any extra amount of Sunday work.

Subsides Soup with Stock.
Braised Ducks. Brown Sauce.
Apple Croquettes. Guava Jelly.
Creamed Turnips. Rice.
Orange and Cress Salad.
Toasted Wafers.
Fluffy Corn Starch. Custard Sauce.
Coffee.

In writing down the marketing list there will be needed for six persons a pair of ducks, a loaf of stale bread, five or six large onions, one quart of beef stock, three medium-sized white turnips, a cupful of rice, two sour oranges, one bunch of watercress, six eggs, six large tart apples, one lemon, two quarts and a pint of milk and such accessories as shortening, corn starch, seasoning, etc.

When ducks are delivered on Saturday, clean them before putting aside. Proceed exactly as for turkey or chicken, but, if rather old, it will be best, before cutting into the birds, to lightly scrub the skin with ivory soap and warm water, then rinse thoroughly and dry with a towel. Unless the gall bladder or entrails have been broken before fully drawn there is no need to wash in a pan of water; simply wipe out the interior of each bird with a cloth wrung out of cold water. Cover and set aside in a cold place until next morning.

As one aim in our planning is to lighten the Sunday work, we will prepare as much of the dinner as possible on Saturday. So after cleaning the ducks let us make the stuffing. Peel two onions, cover with boiling water, boil for five minutes and again drain, then chop fine. Add the liver, chopped separately, and saute quickly in one tablespoonful of hot butter. Take from the fire when beginning to color, add a scant quart of fine soft breadcrumbs, one cupful of finely chopped suet, one teaspoonful of salt, one-third of a teaspoonful of pepper and the amount of sage which best suits the family taste. Set this aside.

Pare, quarter and core the apples and steam them until tender. Mash with a silver spoon, add three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a slight grating of lemon rind, and cook, stirring occasionally until very dry. Cook together one tablespoonful of butter and one of corn starch, and when blended, stir in gradually the apple pulp. As it thickens add the beaten yolks of three eggs and a pinch of salt and stir until very thick, then turn into a bowl, cover closely and put aside.

In the meantime let a quart of milk be heating in a double boiler. Blend together five rounded tablespoonfuls of corn starch, a scant half cupful of sugar, one cupful of cold milk and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt; pour into the scalded milk and stir until smoothly thickened. Cover closely and cook for half an hour, then beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth. Add to the corn starch and turn through lightly but thoroughly. Continue to mix and turn for five minutes, then take from the fire and add such flavoring as is best liked. If you have fancy individual molds, dip out a portion of the mixture and faintly tint it with fruit red or leaf green color paste. Fill the molds (which have been rinsed with cold water) and stand in a cold pantry. Make a soft custard with one pint of milk, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and flavoring, strain into the serving pitcher and also set in the pantry. Pick over and wash the cress very thoroughly; drain and roll it in a wet cloth, then wrap in heavy paper and the preparation for the day is over.

On Sunday morning stuff the ducks and truss into shape. Use any kind of kettle, patent "roaster" or eathen casserole in which they will fit tightly; sprinkle over the bottom a half-cupful of sliced carrot, one sliced onion and two tablespoonfuls of chopped salt pork. On this arrange the ducks. Three hours to three and one-half (according to size) will be needed in a hot oven. At the proper time pour around them a cupful of boiling water, cover tightly and place in the oven. About half an hour before serving lift them out, transfer to a shallow pan and return to the oven (the heat of which has been quickened as much as possible) to brown. Stand the braising pan on top of the range, add a cupful or more of boiling water and stir well with the back of the spoon, so as to loosen the browning. Thicken with browned flour, season and boil gently for five minutes. Draw to one side that the extra fat may rise. Skim this off and strain the gravy into the tureen.

Break an egg into a saucer, add a tablespoonful of warm water and beat with a fork just enough to mix. Form the stiffened apple in tiny croquettes, dip each in the egg, then roll in a second saucer containing plenty of fine dry bread crumbs. These croquettes are to be fried in a kettle of smoking hot fat; this will take but a few moments, and after draining on soft paper they are used as a garnish round the ducks. With this course the guava jelly is past; if a firm imported jelly or paste is used, it may be cut in small cubes before serving.

Peel and slice three onions; put in a kettle with a tablespoonful of butter and cook slowly at the side of the fire for ten minutes; add a quart of beef stock, cover and simmer for forty-five minutes, then rub through a sieve. Thicken a pint of milk with two tablespoonfuls of flour, add to it the onion puree and, cook in a double boiler for ten minutes, adding salt and white pepper to taste.

Pare and dice the turnips. Boil in slightly salted water until tender, changing the water once or twice to make the flavor delicate. Make a cream sauce with one tablespoonful and a half each of butter and flour and three gills of milk, add the drained turnips and simmer very gently for ten minutes longer.

To have rice which is fluffy and dry, use an abundance of water and keep it at a galloping boil. Have at least a gallon of water in a large kettle. Wash the rice through several waters until the last runs off clear. Drain and drop it into the boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt and keep at a furious boil; in from twelve to twenty minutes (according to the age and variety used) it will seem tender to the center when rubbed in the fingers. Drain and let stand over hot water for ten minutes or until needed, keeping it covered with a cloth. To serve prettily, mold it lightly in a small, slightly buttered teacup, turn out on a hot platter and on top of each snowy mold drop a pinch of chopped parsley.

Having washed two rather sour oranges, peel them. With a scissors cut fine sufficient peel to make three tablespoonfuls. Use a sharp knife to quarter the oranges lengthwise, then cut crosswise in thin slices. Mix these with a portion of the cress and heap in a dish spread with the remainder of the cress. Pour over this a French dressing, turn lightly with a fork and sprinkle the cut peel over the top. With this course serve saltines either plain or toasted.

After the dessert has been discussed, pass the coffee, which, for this service, should be percolated and very strong.

SCHOOL OF ACTING.

"I wonder what would become of the modern drama if it weren't for 'Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots'?" writes Helen Ten Broeck in the Dramatic News. "When ever any manager wants a good actor or actress for any old sort of a part he goes at once to 'Mrs. Leffingwell's' and borrow one, and whenever a company closes and you wonder what on earth the robin will do now, poor thing, you are comforted and cheered immensely to learn that 'Mrs. Leffingwell' has taken him under her wing. Margaret Illington was snatched from the Thomas play for 'The Embassy Ball,' Jessie Busley was taken from the cast for 'Wolfville,' Ernest Lawford was transplanted to 'Peter Pan,' and Serrano to 'La Belle Marsellaise.' Fay Davis went from 'Mrs. Leffingwell' to 'Man and Superman,' and when Miss Harned's season closed we all know that Mr. Courtenay and Vincent Serrano were welcomed back to the 'Leffingwell' cast with open arms."
